Centennial Contractors Enterprises to Host 2006 Mid-Atlantic Safety Fair

Lanham, MD – August 17, 2006 – Centennial Contractors Enterprises is on the forefront of the latest trend in the construction industry: Subcontractor Safety Fairs. Centennial will host its 2006 Mid-Atlantic Safety Fair on September 21, 2006 at La Fontaine Bleu at 7963 Annapolis Rd., Lanham, MD 20706.

The fair, designed to increase the overall safety of Centennial's project sites, will feature breakout sessions on Arc Flash NPFA 70E, fall protection, excavation safety, scaffold safety, electrical safety, and crane safety, as well as what to expect during an OSHA inspection, and lead and asbestos awareness. There were also be a variety of outdoor demonstrations including, use of lifts and cranes, and powder actuated tool training.

“Even though we are extremely busy right now, we'll be shutting down each of our job sites for the day so that all of our employees and subcontractors can attend,” said Alan Weiss, senior vice president of Centennial, and the senior executive in charge of Centennial's Mid-Atlantic projects. “It also demonstrates just how seriously we take job site safety.”

There will also be booths set up by local vendors such as Safway and United Rentals, as well as informational booths by the Red Cross, OSHA, Miss Utility, Dupont, St. Paul Travelers and Safeware.
